Figure 2a: Global carbon flow and accumulation (continued on Figure 2b). Brown dotted lines represent the boundaries of the system of interest: the region of anthropogenic influence between the stratosphere-mesosphere and crust-mantle interfaces. Black dotted lines designate scale changes (see legend at bottom of chart). Carbon flow is generally counter-clockwise.

Prepared by I-Chun Hsiao based on the work of Wes Hermann
Global Climate and Energy Project at Stanford (http://gcep.stanford.edu/)
Ver 1.0 April, 2009 © MRS Source: Proceedings of the 2009 MRS Spring Meeting